The game was released in Europe on October 28, 1996, in North America on December 2, 1996, and in Japan on January 2, 1997. The game was originally set for an April 1, 1997 release in North America. The game features one of the first fighting game home video game ports, that allows the characters to be controlled with the face buttons of a keyboard. Each character also has a unique animation, voice, and special moves that change based on the characters' fighting style. There are over forty characters in the game, with more being added in special editions of the game. Players can play through the game in any order, as many times as they wish.
