So, I .Get Ready to Retire — The Time May Already Be Here! If you have a long-term job (like yourself), you probably know what I'm talking about — the financial anxiety that comes when you have many months or years to go before retirement. Do you dread the idea of becoming a broke retiree? Do you feel forced to keep working because you're so far behind on saving money? As I discussed in part 1 of this series, I'm here to tell you that that time to retire may be here now, so you don't have to look at it as a bleak future. There's a way to retire successfully right now, but it does require a mindset change and some financial planning. Here are some tips to help you start planning for your retirement and enjoy your final years on this Earth as much as possible: 1) Calculate the age you want to retire. Calculate the age you'll want to retire, and then subtract 25 years from that number. This is your age 65 cutoff age. Use the age that you actually want to retire, but be prepared to accept the uncertainty of your future if your health takes a turn for the worst. If you're currently 52 years old, for example, and you calculate that your goal is to retire at age 65, you'll plan to be okay at 52 years of age as well. Remember, the age you
