(AFP Photo) (AFP) - Yemen's Houthi rebels fired a rocket at the entrance to a weapons depot in the capital, Sanaa, on Wednesday, a local official said, in a rare instance of cross-border attacks by the Iranian-backed group. "The rocket attack was launched by the Houthis from Saada, a northern region, into Sanaa's Old City, after midnight," Nasser al-Maqbul, deputy head of Sanaa's security and defence department, said in a statement. The military depot was used to store weapons and ammunition, he said, adding that the attack caused no casualties. The accusations come as the country's health ministry reported another death caused by a massive cholera outbreak. 77a5ca646e
