Neil Stanley Neil Stanley (1932 – 3 October 2007) was a British author, television producer, documentary filmmaker and social reformer. Biography Stanley, an All Souls College graduate, was born in 1927. He held a variety of positions in the British broadcasting industry, including producer for the BBC World Service, as well as writing and producing for the ITV's World In Action programme. His first novel, The Scandalous Lord John, was published in 1957. It was also made into a film of the same name, in which Stanley co-starred with Valerie Hobson, William Symonds and Richard Attenborough. It was later adapted for television. Stanley went on to write several other novels, including Embraced by the Hun (1992), Storm (2002) and White Leather (2004). The adaptations of all of these books, except Embraced by the Hun, were made by Stanley's son, Alasdair Stanley. He also wrote the scripts for television programmes. He worked with documentary filmmaker John Irons and they produced the programme, 'Gandhi's Ghosts', which was shown on BBC2 in the 1970s. It also featured Peter Cushing, Sir John Mills and Tariq Ali. Stanley also directed a series of 'making of' documentaries on film director Ken Russell's films, and in 1975 he received an Emmy award for his documentary, Rolling the World. He produced shows for the television series, "People You Meet in the Park" and "Journeys in Television".

He worked on radio, producing BBC Radio 2's Radio 4 series, "Lost in a Lost World", and wrote the play, "Murder in the Art House", which was performed by the Royal Shakespeare Company at Stratford's Courtyard Theatre. In 1986, his book for children, Knight of the Golden Flute, a children's historical adventure, was published and in 1994 his non-fiction book, The Road to Famine, was published. Stanley's novel, The Hidden Heart of the Sea, was published in 1999. Apart from his career as a broadcaster and author, Stanley was a social reformer. He campaigned against racial discrimination, and joined the National Committee

Cambodia Travel Guide Free Online The whole of Cambodia is covered by a 12,000 km borderless protected area, the 4,000,000 square
kilometre Tonle Sap system. It is certainly the biggest and most spectacular river system in the country. Because Cambodia is so close to the sea and Thailand, rivers provide the essential means of transportation. The main rivers are the Mekong and the Tonle Sap, but to get to the river there are many more. The 'Stung Treng', that is in the center of the country is the most important navigable river. Siem Reap in the northwest, at the foot of the Tat Som 'Lauren-ji', has an exotic blend of vitality and the inimitable charm of Southeast Asia. Manners are relatively relaxed, and people are polite and highly social. Siem Reap is a good base for visiting the temples of Angkor and the countryside. The next strategic destination is Phnom Penh, the capital and largest city of Cambodia. Its central location, Hanoi's close proximity and the direct shuttle flights from Hanoi ensure that it will remain the ideal base for travellers to the rest of Vietnam and Cambodia. Almost every major international airline operates regular flights from Hanoi to Phnom Penh. The new four-star Holiday Inn Express near the airport has 176 spacious and comfortable rooms. The Waterfront complex, the Mai Manh Plaza in the city center, and the Comfort Hotel and Spa in nearby Phnom Penh are also good accommodation options. The handsome new Tamarind Hotel is a superb 4-star option. Newly refurbished, it offers modern, air-conditioned rooms and is situated on Phnom Penh's lively street, Monivong

Boulevard. To the south

What's New in the YouTube Widget?

Microsoft has introduced the fourth generation of the Office 365 desktop versions. With each new release, many features have been improved, but the best thing about it is that it remains extremely portable compared to its predecessors, with features that make it comparable to other 3rd party office suites. Mozilla is working on a great project called Boot to Gecko. Boot to Gecko will bring the Firefox browser on a number of the popular operating systems including Windows 7 and Linux. Boot to Gecko lets Firefox run natively on Microsoft's Windows 7 platform, and on popular Linux distributions such as Red Hat Enterprise Linux, SUSE Linux Enterprise Server, and Ubuntu. In addition to running on these operating systems, Boot to Gecko allows developers to run Firefox on Android and Windows Phone 7, as well as tablets running on the Windows 7 platform. Microsoft has just started rolling out a preview version of Boot to Gecko that adds native support to Windows 7 and Windows Server 2008 R2 systems. Windows 8 and other upcoming Windows operating systems will see native support from late next year. As part of the announcement, Microsoft also said that the company is working to bring Firefox to Android devices. The company said that this task won't be done in the next year but will take "sometime in the following years." Boot to Gecko is an ongoing project, and Microsoft said that the company will bring Firefox and Sun's open-source Java technology in the same spirit. Firefox will play well with the new Firefox Windows Runtime technology, while Java will be used to power the Sun Microsystems Applet 2.0 technology. Read more on Live Search News Due to the badly crippled HTML5 support, Apple has announced that they are dropping support for Internet Explorer 11 from the iOS 8.1 update. "So in version 8.1, Safari will no longer support Internet Explorer 11 as a rendering engine," said Apple chief executive Tim Cook during the company's iPhone 6 announcement in September of last year. "We have discontinued development on Safari for Windows and OS X, so we have no current plans for a future release of Safari for Windows and OS X." That means that the only way to use Internet

Explorer 11 on the iPhone and iPad, or any other iPad running iOS 8.1 is to use the web browser within a virtual environment such as Chrome or Opera. Internet Explorer 11 was released on December 31st 2011, bringing Web standards support for a variety of features including media-streaming, web sockets
